

発表者紹介

STOCKHOLM UNIVERSITY STUDENTS

PhD Students

Helena Colliander

Helena Colliander is a PHD student in adult learning at the Department of Behavioural Studies and Learning at Linköping University. She has worked as an upper secondary school teacher and a folk high school teacher and has taught Swedish, Swedish as a Second language and History. At present, she teaches at the Folk High School Teacher Training program and some other courses related to adult learning at Linköping University. She has a Master degree in International and Comparative Education from the International Institute of Education (IIE) at Stockholm University. Her research project is focused on teachers who teach adults in initial and functional literacy, and methodologically, she is inspired by ethnography and narrative inquiry.

Khaleda Gani Dutt

Khaleda's Gani Dutt doctoral dissertation focuses on the impact of education on advocating, promoting and liberating women in rural India. The qualitative case study is the deepening of work carried out as a postgraduate student. Her core research interests are ERT, ESD, Gender, Education and Development.

Natalie Nielsen

Natalie Nielsen holds a bachelor's degree in International Affairs from the University of Virginia, USA, a master's degree in International Affairs from Uppsala University in Sweden, and a second master's degree in Education Management and Administration from Stockholm University in Sweden. Her doctoral studies focus on international mobility programs and their impact on personal development and learning. She began her career working in the field of international affairs at the American Embassy in Stockholm, Sweden in the mid-90's. She started her own business in corporate education in 2000, teaching business English, cross-cultural communication, and leadership. She is passionate about self-development and leadership and has authored a handbook on the topic. She was recently elected as member for the EAIE expert community group in Economics and Business Studies. Natalie's key qualifications are in the areas of international relations and diplomacy, international education management and leadership, and her research interests include the impact of exchange and mobility programs on personal development, learning and leadership.

Master Students

Conor Diamond

Conor Diamond is studying a Master degree in International and Comparative Education at the Institute of International Education at Stockholm University. He comes from Northern Ireland, and gained his Bachelor's degree in Political Science and International Studies from Queen's University Belfast in 2013, where his studies focused on political theory, multiculturalism, and the effects of globalization on comparative European politics and policies. During this time, he was invited to present at a conference about the globalization of education, and the role of the university in a globalized context. Conor has a primary research interest in the study of governance and public policy issues, from the local through to the international levels. He is currently researching the capacity of education policies to foster greater social integration and cohesion in multicultural societies.

Elisavet Koutsilieri

Elisavet Koutsilieri holds a bachelor's degree in Business Administration from University of Macedonia, Greece, a MSc. in Energy management & Environmental Protection from University of Piraeus and National Technical University of Athens, Greece and she is currently studying a second Master degree in International & Comparative Education at the Institute of International Education at Stockholm University. She also has a Special Training in Education from University of West Macedonia, Greece and a Certificate of Pedagogical and teaching competence from ASPAITE (Faculty of Pedagogical & Technological Education). Her research interests are: environmental sustainability, Education for Sustainable Development and Social and Emotional Intelligence.

Maya Niemeyer

Maya received her Bachelor degree from the Otto-von-Guericke University Magdeburg, Germany in Educational Science in 2013. During her Bachelor studies she gained international experience through a Semester in Istanbul, Turkey. Being interested in Migration throughout her studies, an internship at an NGO working with unaccompanied minor refugees introduced her to the field of refugee education and particular the issues of unaccompanied minor refugees. The interest in the field, was reflected throughout her studies at IIE, Maya mainly focused on education issues of unaccompanied minor refugees in developed countries. The presentation will deal with the education of unaccompanied minors in Sweden and Germany and point out problems within their education.

Daniel Roe

Dan is from Washington, DC (US), where he worked as a law teacher in a juvenile prison and low-proficiency inner-city high schools. He has also been a coach and competitive athlete in several sports. His research interests include sport pedagogy, student-centered learning, and education in criminal justice settings. His presentation will discuss the need and opportunities for educators to think outside the box when teaching high-need and reluctant learners. In particular, it considers how sports-based learning can improve life chances for court-involved youth.

Aljaž Kovač

Aljaž Kovač has waded into educational studies after a decade of dabbling in literature and the media. He has worked as editor-in-chief of an important Slovenian literature journal, a project coordinator for the Berlin State Museums and as a radio host at the Slovenian National Radio. In the meantime he has also translated four books, by such authors as V. S. Naipaul and Don DeLillo. After graduating with an M.A. degree in English Language and Comparative Literature at the University of Ljubljana in Slovenia he went to live in England where he taught for a year at the excellent Clitheroe Royal Grammar School. He now finds himself in Stockholm on a grant from the Slovenian Ministry of Culture and is looking to do his research in the fields of literature teaching and pedagogy, technology in education and educational psychology.

Tatsuhei Morozumi

Tatsuhei Morozumi is a master student from Japan, major in International and Comparative Education at Stockholm University. His research interests are: youth policy, young people in post-modern society and youth participation in Europe and Japan. On the presentation, he will discuss young people's situation and issues facing today by comparing between Japan and Sweden.

Sovichea Vann

Sovichea Vann is from Cambodia, studying a Master Degree in International and Comparative Education at Stockholm University after completing his graduate degree in Human Resource Development from Burapha University, Thailand and Bachelor of Education from Royal University of Phnom Penh, Cambodia. Mostly, he has worked as a teacher of English in few universities and private schools in Cambodia, a volunteer for UNESCO Bangkok, and a social worker for immigrant education projects in Thailand. His researches of interest are Comparative Education, Educational Policies Studies, Primary Education, Teacher Training in ICT Education, and Quality Assurance in Higher Education. In his presentation, he will discuss key aspects of education system in Cambodia by identifying the access, equity, and quality of primary education today that has encountered a number of impacts after a serious civil war about three decades ago.